

Situational Awareness

Do you know what to do if an armed intruder broke into your home or place of business? Are you prepared for an unwarranted attack from a criminal(s)? Being aware of our environment and potential danger is the foundation of any effective corporate or personal security plan. In response to the dangers inherent in a free society, public safety experts at the Mercyhurst University Public Safety Institute developed a concise but intensive training program titled “Situational Awareness.” This is NOT a “fighting” curriculum, but rather one focused on developing the mental and emotional skills needed to survive high risk events, either personally or in the work place.

Who does the training? Educators from the Mercyhurst Police Academy with extensive experience in law enforcement, corrections and the military.

Who can attend? Businesses, government agencies, schools or citizens interested in the safety of themselves and their families.

Where and when is it? Classes are held as requested. Sessions vary in length for corporate vs. individual attendees, from four to six hours.

What does it cost? Inexpensive rates vary from corporate to individual students. Contact us for more information.
